

RESOURCE MANAGEMENT STAFF PROFILE

Summary

February, 1979

When considered as a group, the members of the professional staff who have begun work on the Resource Management Staff after February 1978 are somewhat younger, slightly more female, more highly educated (schooled), and of a lower grade-level than those on board before that time. While a substantial majority ^{have} worked previously in the federal government, only half have served in the military and fewer still have had experience in the intelligence community. Because their backgrounds are stronger in political and economic analysis than they are in technical and engineering fields, the newer members have brought rough parity between these two groups to the Staff as a whole.

[When examining the tables, please note that, in many cases, determining an individual's area specialty was almost entirely an arbitrary procedure.]
